As a high school senior, I have grown up with technology and been taught by technology. How do use I use it? Through computers, cell phones, telephones, cars: everything around me is technology. I use technology everyday constantly. It is an everyday use that I am not aware that I use it even. I am reliant for example, on my cell phone and the internet the most. Whether it is for school use or to get in touch with someone, I am using them. I guess it may be lazy work, for example, when I want to know the weather, I will look it up on the internet in like thirty seconds. It is fast, easy, and simply improving everyday. More in less time has just always been appealing to society including me.

A few days ago, I was watching a video on YouTube called "Did You Know" and it addressed the fact that technology might improve so much that it might overtake the human race. It is a power hungry gadget that it really could. In a few years, I believe that society will actually become too reliant on technology and we may get fat and lazy due to it. For example, a few nights ago on the news, I watched that in France there is a pizza vending machine. How healthy is it? Who knows but all the hungry customers have to do is put in some money and the simple machine makes dinner.

Personally, technology is a wonderful aspect to life but I think it could take its time. I feel that those coming up with technology are very smart people and I give them props for it but it scares me to think of everything that is growing. For example, the wondrous cell phone became popular like four years ago and now even ancient people, such as my parents, who barely knew how to handle a house phone, always rely on there cell phones now and can text.

Technology is very wonderful and convenient though, so, I am very thankful that I can use it and that it is in my reach. I can do simple tasks faster now and it saves time for me in my daily life. When I go to college, I know that I will be buying a laptop and that I will have other little gadgets that I never had before so it ought to be fun! In addition, I would just like to thank you for taking your time in reading my essay for the scholarship your communications company is offering.
