

Communication

Technology is the axis of the human race. It is the sole provider of life and existence on this earth; through communication, navigation, and other relations. There are many different ways technology is used today. My life is centered on technology. I use technology every day, whether it be using the computer to check email or surf the web, listening to music on my iPod, finding directions on a GPS, or calling one of my friends on my cell phone. It will improve our lives because of the constant improvements in the current technology.

In almost everything I do, I use some aspect of technology. Most of the interaction I have with technology is during school. Students are taught using projectors in the classroom or computers in the library for every day work. I write a number of essays throughout the school year using computers. I use them for every part of every essay that I write. It might be a research paper that I do on the internet. It might also be a normal essay using the computer to write every draft with a word processor. School is one of the many places I use technology.

Another place I use technology is when I am traveling or away from home. My cell phone is with me where ever I go. It allows me to communicate with whoever I want whenever I want. It is also a great way to communicate with friends and family through texting. Texting is a fabulous way to get a hold of someone in a quick and efficient way. I also use my iPod to listen to music, watch movies, and participate in other forms of entertainment. It is wonderful to have a device that has unlimited ways of communication, and fun.

Technology has evolved in such a helpful way and so rapidly that it will improve our lives tremendously. The applications for all of the different technological devices out there help with a numerous amount of every day activities. Advances in technology will make it easier to answer questions, check e-mail, and check the news through peoples very own cell phones. This helps our lives because it allows us to do those things in a way that makes it easier and faster so that we might do the things that would be postponed if we didn't have this technology accessible.

The technology of the world is evolving constantly, which means that it will make life easier because of the accessibility through each device. The improvements of each technological device advance lifestyles because it allows people to do things that weren't able to be done before. Technology is evolving in a way that will improve the lives of the future generations.
